Pacific Problems Can Be Solved. Elimination of the causes of war, with a view to ending taxation for military purposes, was defined as the big object which the forthcoming limitation of arms conference might accomplish, in the opinion of Charles Edward Russell, speaking at the preliminary meeting of the unofficial advisory committee to the conference, which convened at the call of Samuel Gompers at the Lafayette Hotel yesterday.

"It is useless to attempt to regulate manulaughter," declared Mr. Russell. "In Europe France must be protected and assured that no burglarious attack will come down on her again as in 1914. The Senate left her unprotected, and there can be no true peace in Europe until sig fis protected. An international police force could do that.

Urges As tances to Japan.

"Japan is in China for essential raw materials which she must have. If the conference can give Japan assurances that her supplies of materials will be forthcoming, the Pacific problem is settled.

"We need not be overawed by the words of authority emanating from unknown sources that this cannot be done. War can be ended, just as duelling between individuals was ended."

About forty people, representing various organizations, met under the chairmanship of Mr. Gompers. Seven chairmanship of mr. Gompers. chairmanship of Mr. Gompers. Seyen committees were named to organize the work of the advisory committee, among them being one on exhibits, to work through cartoons, moving pictures and other publicity methods to form public opinion on the creation of a permanent peace plan.

Organizes Against War. Chairman Gompers welcomed the conferees, saying that their work was to help in organizing and coordinating the opinion and convictions of the public upon the vital question at issue—to prevent war.

"Sentimentally," said Mr. Gompers, "may neonly want peece with ers, "most people want peace, but in consequence of their unorganized condition they permit those interested financially and otherwise in the production of munitions and impleproduction of munitions and implements of warfare to do the thinking and speaking for them. The time has come when some forward step must be taken to prevent a recurrence of these terrific struggles between man and man and nation and nation. It is necessary to rouse the spirit of justice and freedom of humanity so that no nation can stand before the world convicted of perfldy in the movement of international the movement of international brotherhood and international peace Cites War Expenditures. When we think that the expenditures of the United States for wa purposes past present and future, is 92 cents out of every dollar the Treasury receives—about 68 cents for past wars and 24 for maintaining war establishments-it is appalling. We must take advantage of this opportunity now presented to bring about a solution of this com-plex problem."

The meeting will reconvene at 19 o'clock this morning.
